Register (<https://cvent.me/Nx2Pyn>) online for the water sector conference designed for utility executives.

While there are benefits to virtual meetings, there's simply nothing like being in the same room face-to-face with colleagues. The value of in-person learning reigns supreme, especially when the workplace is changing, technology is advancing, and new challenges are arising.

AMWA's Executive Management Conference (EMC) sets the gold standard for in-person executive learning and networking for senior water utility executives. It affords an opportunity to hear and learn from other utility leaders and sector experts about the issues affecting them the most. The collective thought leadership of attendees provides a forum for not just talking about problems but for formulating solutions. So, join water sector leaders this fall in Denver, Colorado, to learn new skills and approaches.

Other leading reasons to attend the 2021 EMC include:

First class agenda: AMWA listened to members' top of mind management issues, which provides a blueprint for the conference program, and identified key topics for the agenda:

- Workforce training and other organizational challenges
- Implementing cybersecurity: Guidance for CEOs and boards
- Diversity, equity, and inclusion
- Federal water policy developments on PFAS, lead, and infrastructure investment

Exclusive peer-to-peer networking: The program will allow for ample time for attendee engagement and will include opportunities for peer-to-peer learning, networking breaks and discussion groups that can lead to breakthrough moments.

Picturesque locale: In addition to enjoying the many amenities offered by the host conference site, The Brown Palace Hotel and Spa (<https://www.brownpalace.com/>), attendees will have the chance to explore the attractions the Mile High City has to offer, including fine dining, art, shopping, and more.

Why miss the opportunity to learn from sector experts, connect with colleagues, and explore the sights and sounds of Denver and the Rocky Mountains?
